THE HOLIDAYS.

A Tour Among the Advertising

Patrons of the Whig.

It is with much pleasure, as Christmas draws near, that we extend a heartily greeting to our many advertising

patrons, who, during the year that has passed, have used the columns of the Whig to place their goods before the people. During the year several changes have taken place among the business firms

and some familiar names, seen in our columns for years, are seen there no more,

while new names greet the eye of the reader as he glances through the paper

and it is not always easy to supply the gaps. Recognizing the fact that as an advertising medium the Whig reaches

those who are the most profitable

customers, the enterprising firm in both cities places their "ads" in its columns,

and it is not always easy to supply the

gaps. Recognizing the fact that as an

Wing and Souther.

ROUTE 1, BURLINGTON, VERMONT.

G. A. BOUTELLE, Editor.
All business letters should be addressed to G. A. BOUTELLE, Editor, and communications intended for publication should be addressed "Editor of Wing and Souther."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1890.

The Chicago Inter Ocean estimates that a saloon keeper can live and even get rich if he has twenty "regular customers." Of course the list has to be replenished often, as when the old customer goes to a town his patronage is no longer profitable. It is then that the boys of the family are gathered in.

Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, made an eloquent speech Saturday in support of the Election Bill. Even the Democratic papers in that State were a powerful aid, and has given the friends of the bill renewed courage. Mr. Spooner hadled the Democrats without flinching, and his reference to the party which has all these years encouraged the demagogues of night riders, the shooting of such and the whipping of women, going excited at the thought of a demagogical visit of a Federal official whose only duty is to make a police inquiry as to the competence of the local authorities, was a powerful argument. He also referred to the speech of Senator Stewart, who copied the Democratic argument that the law could not be enforced because public opinion would not support it, and said "To that complexion have we come at last. Have we fallen on a coalition in our country that calls for preservation by law of partly of the ballot at the North, but that we must stop at Mason and Dixon a line, because public opinion in the South is in favor of disunion? I cannot believe it."

The Lowell Courier says: It looks as though the United States Senate would adopt a modified previous question for use on a final occasion, or at least for a specified time. This is a slight sign of progress, but only a slight one. There is more sense written, and uttered, and thought about this matter of the transaction of business in our national legislature, than about any other subject—the McKinley bill not excepted. Men seem to take leave of common sense when this question comes up. No such middle exists in any other deliberative bodies. The New England town meeting which is the typical public assembly of the country, even gets stranded on an inextinguishable debate. No political caucus, or convention, or religious conference, or symposium, or military assembly, or literary or social symposium, allows itself to be dragged along helplessly by a drowsy discussion, which it does not desire to hear. What a simple and clean cut proposition and principle it is, that when men form themselves into a "body" of any sort the majority of that body shall control its action. It is a principle of absolute necessity, and everybody absolutely comes to it. To divorce our two legislative branches from it is to leave them as sea without compass or rudder, subject to every gale and squall. The House of Representatives has found even the absolute and always applicable previous question insufficient to offset malicious and determined filibustering. The Senate has just reached the point where it will take a step to the direction of despatch.

Stagnant Facts
Some of our esteemed contemporaries seem to be a good deal exercised because the Wisconsin has pointed out the fact that the Australian ballot system has proved an expensive and complicated luxury in several of the States where it has been adopted. Indeed in their perturbed "lume of mind" they are not afraid to address the matter to the point, raised, but, unfortunately of course misinterpreted what we said. For instance it is asserted that the Wisconsin published an extract from a private letter from Minnesota as a conclusive reason why the system should not be adopted in Maine. Now what we did say was that the letter was exactly the same as the letter from New York, Indiana and Massachusetts, namely, to the effect that the system had proved expensive and so complicated that thousands of voters were disfranchised. No doubt these facts are disastrous to the advocates of the system in this State, but they are matters for the taxpayers to consider. If the conditions in this State were such as to render it impossible, or even difficult for the majority of the people to register their will at the polls the question of expense in securing a remedy would not be entitled to so much weight, but they are not. No vote in the Union, we are not under the system the ballot is cast in the popular verities registered at the polls with greater fervor than in Maine. This being the fact we submit that it will be poor policy for the Legislature to submit the taxpayers to "unnecessarily increased expenses" in the adoption of something they do not need and do not want.

The Apportionment Bill.
The Washington Post, speaking of the Apportionment bill, which passed the House precisely as prepared by the Republican members of the (senate Committee—Messrs. Dannel, McKenna, Adams, Boutelle, Taylor, Frank, Bingham and Sherman, and unanimously reported from the committee, says:
The passage of the Apportionment bill is the promptest piece of legislation of its kind enacted in the history of the government. Within the short space of six months has the annexation of the population been determined, the results of the enumeration forwarded to the Census Office, thoroughly verified, labeled and official declaration of the population of the United States made to Congress, and an apportionment of representatives, based upon that official declaration, made and passed by the lower branch of the National Legislature. When it is considered the many difficulties through which this mass of work has gone, this stride in this era of progress is so many things is indeed astounding—an apportionment bill formulated, considered in committee, unanimously reported to the House and passed on an emergency within a little less than six months ago—or all within a little over a year and a half of the passage of the law for the taking of the Eleventh Census.

The actual count has come up to the estimate made by Gen. Francis A. Walker, superintendent of the ninth and tenth census, and the estimate made by the late Hon. S. S. Cox, who was chairman of the committee that framed the present law. As to the alleged discrepancy in the New York city enumeration, the authorities of that city have to avail themselves of the provisions of the law. They did not present to the superintendent of census the proper returns for the city.

They were not in proof as substantiating their charges. If by them they could have proven their charges, doubtless they would have been subjected to them. As to the complaints from Nashville, and the count made by the municipal authorities, it was found upon examination that the Federal enumeration fell only 353 short. The Nashville authorities apologized for their complaint.
Messrs. Tillman, of South Carolina, and Washington, of Tennessee, championed the returns of the eleventh census. They saw no politics in the business.
Mr. Porter, the superintendent of the census feels quite gratified at the result. He thinks it doubtful if the compliance with the provisions of a census law and the consequent apportionment thereon could be accomplished in any quicker time.
